Doors By Susan L. Zeder

A powerful and sensitive contemporary play about a boy and his parents on the day of their separation. A celebrated work by America's most produced new playwright for young people. One set. The present. Cast of 3 men, 1 woman.

Twelve-year old Jeff and his parents on the day of their separation: before Jeff can deal with the impending divorce he must face and play out his fears and his fantasies with his best friend, Sandy. Although the situation of the play involves separation and divorce, the subject of the play deals with the importance of talking and listening. Once the unspoken is finally out in the open, the whole family can begin to heal. An emotional yet humorous work, beloved by audiences and actors alike.
